Subject: Fort Hood JP8 Spill Update 2/2/2014
Date: Sunday, February 02, 2014 8:14:02 PM

Good Evening Mr. Brescia and Ms. Wooten,

Wanted to provide you an update of today's activities.

We were able to locate an equipment rental company that was able to deliver the necessary machinery to construct a dam downstream of the spill. We were, however, unable to find a soil pit that was open to purchase the clay required to build a permanent underflow dam. As an interim solution, I requested that my staff construct a temporary earthen dam. This earthen dam will ensure that no free product will migrate downstream and contaminate a large section of the stream should we see a significant rainfall event. We will be putting resources towards a more permanent underflow dam tomorrow.

Throughout the day, we continued free product removal operations. We are starting to show signs of improvement upstream as we work to accelerate the collection of free product downstream through the utilization of leaf blowers to "push" free product downstream. This has proven to be effective.

Starting tomorrow, we are going to section off the effected stream into three sections. We will be using hard boom in each of these sections to collect free product. Additional crew members and resources have been called in to quicken this process and move us towards the stabilization of the site.

As promised, I will call you with an update no later than Wednesday. By then, I should have a better estimate on our product recovery rates.

As always, should you need to reach out to me sooner, please don't hesitate to give me a call. My cell phone and office line are below.

Best,

Don
